Why does my business need to text?

Text message capability is no longer an option for businesses looking to provide high-quality customer experiences in today's mobile market. Now more than ever, consumers place a premium on speed and convenience, and research shows that the fastest and most convenient form of communication is texting. Research also shows that customers like companies more when they can be reached via text message, and that most people wish more companies would start using text to communicate.

- 97% of Americans text at least once a day.
- 96% of text messages get read within three minutes of delivery.
- 75% of respondents feel that texting serves to improve the overall brand experience when communicating with businesses.
- 64% of customers believe businesses should use texting to interact more often.

Don't change a thing, except for the customer experience.

To improve the customer experience, you don't need to buy new equipment or learn a separate interface. Your employees can send text messages as emails using their existing numbers, customers will be able to respond with their cell phones using the same devices they use to connect with friends and family.

Incorporate text into your business operations.

The immediate response rate and high open rates to text messages make it an ideal tool for business communications. Sophisticated enterprises are harnessing its power for employee communications, scheduling, advertising, in addition to customer service.
